Final Step Is Taken

SUPERVISORS SET DATE FOR MENLO ELECTION

Tuesday, November 15th, was set by the board of supervisors Monday as the date for the election to decide whether or not Menlo Park would incorporate. This action was the final step in the matter which has been before the board for three weeks, and followed the presentation of a revised petition from which several pieces of acreage land had been excluded.

The matter was brought before the board Monday by Attorney Joseph B. Gordon, representing the incorporationist interest. Gordon explained that the property which had been objected to at the previous meeting had been excluded and presented a revised description which County Engineer George Kneese had prepared.

Chairman Poole asked if there were any further protests and Miss Sarah Fry, proprietress of the Menlo Park Goat Farm, appeared and asked that her property be excluded. Miss Fry stated that incorporation would be of no benefit to her, that it would result in the creation of a superfluous group of office holders, would increase taxes and would place the burden of street improvemen upon the property owners instead of upon the county. As Miss Fry' property was less than ten acres the board could take no official ac tion upon her protest.

Following the hearing of pro tests Supervisor Brown moved that an election be called on November 15th. At the request of Attorney Gordon, the fire house on Merril avenue was chosen as the polling place, and the fol lowing residents of the distric were chosen election officers:

H. Perry, Fannie I. Kurtz, Mrs Fred Worrell, Buela Bower, Delle Moore and Meta Kugeler.

SEQUOIA HIGH SCHOOL BATTLES PALO ALTO TODAY

Sequoia will battle Palo Alto in her third P. A. L. game of the season today at Palo Alto.

At the end of the P. A. L. race last week Palo Alto with a veteran team hoped to be the coming champion. However, San Mateo traveled down to Palo Alto and handed them a 28-0 defeat.

As San Mateo defeated Sequoia 51-0, Palo Alto by comparative scores should be 23 points better than Sequoia. Comparative scores mean nothing in football, however. Considering the veterans of the two teams is another thing. Palo Alto has practically a veteran team. What few first-string men they did lose have been ably supplanted by their powerful second string Palo Alto's second string cleaned up on all the other second string they played last year.

Coach Dimick's men are no cowered by Paly's array of veterans. Sequoia's men are all ready for the tussle. The Cherokees will enter the fray as the "underdogs," which, according to "Pop" Warner, Stanford coach, is the best frame of mind to enter a game.

Sequoia's probable line-up wil be:

MAY CHANGE NAME OF PHELPS STREET

The fact that although Phelps street is a continuation of the Middlefield road but bears a different name is confusing to motorists and to strangers in town was brought out before the board of trustees Monday night by Trustee Z. T. Thorning. Thorning proposed the changing of the name of Phelps street to Middlefield road. This plan also met with favor from the others on the board.

As, however, Phelps street is one of the oldest street names in the town, and as considerable sentiment may be connected with it, the board felt that before any action was taken the matter should be discussed with the property owners on the street.

The dance of the firemen is an annual event, and the occasion upon which they call upon the public for money. The proceeds of the dance are depended upon by the firemen for their expenses for the year. Also as this is the only opportunity which the public can show its gratitude to the volunteer firemen for their efforts in safeguarding property during the year, and the department has been very active this year, the sale of tickets is expected to be very heavy.

The Fire Department dance committee wish to announce that the music for the annual dance tomorrow evening, October 22, will be furnished by Art Wiedeman's 8-piece orchestra instead of advertised previously.

Judge Ray Griffin Suffers Relapse While Presiding in Justice Court Passes Away Shortly Afterward

After weeks of suffering and illness Judge Ray Griffin passed away at his home on Winslow street yesterday afternoon, following a relapse which he suffered on the day previous. Judge Griffin had been in poor health for several weeks and had been away in the mountains for the past two weeks in an endeavor to regain his health.

He had returned a few days ago in apparently much better condition, and his many friends were congratulating him upon his recovery. The news of his death was, therefore, the more of a shock to the many citizens of this district whom the judge had served well and faithfully as justice of the peace.

Judge Ray Griffin collapsed yesterday morning while trying a case in his court. He was immediately removed to his home where he became unconscious. Dr. J. L. Ross was called to attend the stricken jurist. It was found that the judge was suffering from uremic poinsoning nad high blood pressure. Up until the time of his death he did not regain consciousness.

His devoted mother and his brother, Frank, were at his bedside awaiting the worst. Father Ryan was there also waiting for the first sign of returning consciousness to administer the last sacrament, extreme unction.

There were numerous callers at the stricken home all the afternoon, offering their assistance and sympathy to the mother and brother of the popular judge, who had a host of friends throughout the county.

Judge Griffin was elected for for the first time to the office of justice of the peace of this township in 1918, shortly after his graduation from the Sequoia Union High School. Griffin was a candidate against the incumbent, George Seeley, whom he defeated by a narrow margin. Since that time he has been elected with out opposition, and has become one of the best known justices of the state.

Griffin was born in San Francisco thirty six years ago, but came to Redwood City shortly after the quake and fire with his widowed mother and his brother, Frank. He entered the schools here and was one of the brightest pupils. Handicapped by a most serious affliction, paralysis resulting from shock as a result of the San Francisco earthquake he placed his entire energy into his studies, and instead of playing as normal boys did, he spent his whole spare time in reading. He thus built up a wonderful intellect in his almost inutile body, and at the graduation of his class from high school in 1914, was the highest ranking graduate.

Always popular with all who knew him, Judge Griffin, has always been surrounded by a group of friends who were always ready and glad to be of service to him and to do for him what his own crippled limbs could not do. In school and in his office he was never left alone but was always served by willing hands of friends.

Ray Griffin was one of the charter members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club and has always taken a very active interest in the club and its welfare. He was also a member of the local parlor of Native Sons and of the Knights of Columbus in San Mateo.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Despite a growth probably unparalleled in any other equal sized territory, the trend toward prosperity in California has been steady and substantial. A survey made by the California Development Association showed that this state's net industrial income, including agriculture, lumbering, fishery products and value added by manufacturing, has increased from $513,657,000 in 1909 to $2,147,501,000 in 1925.

California cities, both large and small are fighting for street and highway safety in a general campaign for the adoption of the uniform traffic ordinance, which the women of California, under the auspices of the California Development Association, are advocating to all communities in the state. San Francisco, Burlingame, Palo Alto, Sacramento and San Leandro are cities which most recently fell into line in the campaign.

California motorists to the number of 35,262 fell afoul of the state motor vehicle laws during the first six months of 1927. This is shown in a report issued by the State Motor Vehicle Department. Driving while intoxicated, speeding and driving recklessly accounted for 85 per cent of the total. The records show 27,123 paid fines or served jail sentences for driving under the influence of liquor and speeding.

All California state motor traffic officers hereafter are to drive motorcycles instead of automobiles while in the performance of their duty. This is ordered by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Motor Vehicle Department, who says that when he assumed office nearly half of the state's force was using automobiles instead of motorcycles.

One of the largest airplane transportation and manufacturing concerns to enter the California field is the Maddux Air Line, Inc., a Delaware corporation, which last week filed articles of incorporation with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan. The Maddux corporation, capitalized at $5,000,000 will have its headquarters in Los Angeles, and the state agent is J. L. Maddux. The company is interested generally in the airplane industry.

The Federal Land Bank of Berkeley last week reported receipts of 244 applications for a total of $1,504,400 in loans during September. The bank made 95 loans totaling $389,500 during the month. A total of 164 appraisals were made, comprising 20,344 acres in California, 3,915 in Utah, and 11,153 in Arizona. An announcement was made last week that San Francisco's fifth annual horse show would be staged November 10, 11 and 12, at the St. Francis Riding Club. San Francisco's horse show is one of the banner events on the season's social calendar with many of the horse owners exhibiting their own horses in the ring. There will be many trophies and sweepstakes in all of the classes.

After re-electing all officers, the seventh annual meeting of the Redwood Empire Association concluded its sessions with a banquet at Santa Rosa last week. Outstanding in the recommendations was a demand that the Redwood Empire's marathon, run last summer from San Francisco to Grants Pass, Ore., be made an annual international event. A first prize of $10,000 and at least $5,000 in additional prizes were favored.

Presided over by Mrs. Ernest Wallace of San Francisco as chairman, the state commission to plan for the establishment of a separate state penal institution for women offenders last week met at the state capitol. Plans were discussed to begin work immediately on the task of looking over sites for the proposed institution, considering types of buildings, etc. The commission will make its report to the governor.

Officials of the maintenance of way department of the Southern Pacific Railroad announced last week that decision on whether to build a Carquinez Straits bridge from Martinez to Benicia would not be reached before November. At the present time the Duncanson-Haralson Company of San Francisco is boring under instruction of the Southern Pacific to test the condition of the strait bed for installation of piling and bridge supports. If the report of the company is satisfactory and if an appropriation for building the bridge is obtained officials said the bridge will be erected. The situation at present was characterized as "favorable."

All records for tonnage hauled over the Sierras during the heavy harvest month of September were broken this year by the Southern Pacific, according to figures compiled by J. H. Dyer, general manager. A total of 54,107 cars passed Summit station during the month, exceeding the previous record by 7,875 cars. An average of 1,803 cars was moved over the mountain daily, exceeding by 163 any previous daily average for September. Delay in the harvest of the grape crop was responsible for the heavy movement of eastbound freight.

Resort owners and managers from every part of the state are being called upon to meet in Sacramento November 18 and formulate plans for a campaign advertising California's vacation attractions more widely, it was announced last week by the newly formed California Resort Association. There is a necessity for organization if California is to compete successfully for tourists and vacationists with Florida, Canada, Oregon and other localities, according to W. B. Golatt of Donner Lake, recently chosen temporary head of the movement.

School teachers who succumb to the darts of Dan Cupid during the school year are not subject to dismissal for that reason, and regulations enacted by local districts in requiring their discharge are strictly invalid and contrary to the spirit of the Teachers' Tenure Act. This opinion, settling a long standing dispute among school people, was handed to the State Department of Education by Attorney General U. S. Webb.

Business men of the state are showing considerable interest in the announcement that Butler Brothers, national wholesalers of general merchandise, contemplate the construction of a $1,000,000 plant covering eight acres, in San Francisco. The firm, which is now celebrating its fiftieth anniversary, intends opening the distributing house as early in 1928 as possible, to serve merchants in the states west of the Rocky Mountains.

Announcing plans to manufacture pulp and paper from grapevine cuttings, the Sacramento Pulp and Paper Company, $1,000,000 corporation, was formed in Sacramento last week. Paper will be made under a process discovered by H. D. Wagnon, one of the corporation directors, it was said, and Sacramento has been selected as the manufacturing point because there are approximately 100,000 acres of grapevines available within a radius of 50 miles.

An earth temblor of sharp intensity shook Los Angeles last week, extending as far east as Riverside and as far south as Santa Ana. No damage has been reported to the police or sheriff's office. The temblor struck while the world's series baseball game was in progress, and crowds watched the scoreboards swayed by the earth rumble. There was no excitement in theaters where returns were being announced.

Juvenile delinquency is on the increase in California, according to requests for finger-print records in the State Bureau of Criminal Identification during the last three fiscal years. Clarence S. Morrill, bureau chief, revealed that 5,833 juvenile cases involving finger-print records were brought to attention of the state during the last fiscal period. The total was 5,188 for the fiscal year ending June, 1926.

C. announced last week that October 27, Roosevelt's birthday, will be a National Navy Day, and that seventeen ships, the New Mexico, Tennessee, Holland, Aroostook, Lavellette, Somers, Moody, Hull, Wood, Yarborough, Litchfield S-14, S-15, S-16, S-17, S-42 and S-43, will be docked for public inspection at Oakland, San Francisco, Benicia, Martinez and Mare Island.

Because of several fatalities at what is known as the Chittenden crossing of the Southern Pacific, near Santa Cruz, supervisors last week passed an ordinance calling for stop signs on each side of every railroad crossing and making it a misdemeanor not to stop. The action is believed to be the first of its kind ever taken in the state. Penalty for nonobservance of the stop signs is not to exceed $500 fine or a prison term.

Los Angeles county leads all counties of the state in total value of real estate, nonoperative and personal property and money and solvent credits, yet its total indebtedness is surpassed nine times by San Francisco county, the nearest rival for property value honors, according to an official statement just issued by the California Controller's Department showing the value of property and indebtedness of each county in the state for the current year.

The total value of all property in Los Angeles county, subject to tax assessment and including the value of railroads as assessed by the State Board of Equalization, is placed at $3,336,940,015. San Francisco county ranks second among the counties of the state with a total valuation of $1,025,317,945, followed by Alameda county with $469,981,274. Fresno and Kern counties are each given a valuation of $205,100,000.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has donated to the University of California, at Berkeley, in excess of $1,750,000 for the erection and furnishing of a 500-room dormitory building to serve as a residence and social center in Berkeley for both American and foreign university students.

Building and loan associations in California have taken a leading position among the various states in membership, assets and rate of growth during 1926. This was shown in a report of the secretary to the United States League of Local Building and Loan Associations, delivered at the annual convention of the league in Ashville, N. C. Aggregate assets of about 200 associations operating in the state at the close of 1926 increased approximately $50,000,000 during the year, totaling $235,000,000.

Virtually every important nation on the globe will be represented when the Pacific Trade and Travel Exposition opens in the San Francisco Civic Auditorium on November 11, it was announced last week by officials of the Foreign Trade Club, which is sponsoring the exposition. Many of the features that made the Panama-Pacific Exposition famous will be reproduced in an up-to-date form, and the entire exposition will form a highly specialized review of the products exchanged throughout the vast Pacific region.

Preparations for a general observance of the sixty-ninth anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, October 27, in the schools of California are being laid by William John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction.

A new State publication, The State Banking Department, made its appearance last week in Sacramento, State Bank Superintendent Will C. Wood announcing its purpose will be to establish closer contacts with the state banks and keep both the public and the banks fully advised concerning policies of his department.

IS A HEALTHIER STRONGER GIRL

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible through the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 113 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon.

Girls who work in factories know just how Miss Schmidt felt. Perhaps they, too, will find better health by taking the Vegetable Compound.

Some One at the Door

"It sounds as if some one was coming for lunch," said Mrs. Maude Scofield, San Francisco woman, to her husband, as she started to the door. The guest was a big steam roller. It had run wild three blocks down a hill to the Scofield home, and finding the door not open, the guest smashed the front of the house, splintered a partition, knocked down the hostess, and almost demolished the place. There may have been a time when home was a safe place, but that was before man began scooting around in seven-ton trucks and three-ton airplanes.—Capper's Weekly.

Ordinary, Sensible Citizens Must Reduce Fire Waste

EVERY year, fire, in this country, burns property worth over half a million dollars. In addition to this direct loss, is the much greater loss caused indirectly by unemployment resulting from destruction of plants, loss of profits and good will which comes from interruption of business it is impossible to compute the increased loss caused by these indirect agencies, but it would be safe to say the total is brought to well over a billion dollars a year.

Think what this sum of money would mean if used for schools, roads, or, what may be closer to the heart, if it were used for governmental purposes and taxes lowered accordingly. Instead, it is a great fortune destroyed as completely as if so many dollars were sunk in the ocean.

Something must be done! There has been laudable co-operation among editors in this country who have written voluminously on the subject, doing their bit to stamp it out. But that is not sufficient, valuable as it is. There must be wholesouled opposition of the ordinary sensible citizens of every locality. The careless and irresponsible must be made to feel the enmity of public opinion. Fire loss can be checked. The people, and only the people, can do it.

The Laborer Worthy His Hire

RESTRICTIVE immigration is the greatest piece of legislaton that has been enacted for 50 years, states Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, in urging more drastic immigration laws before the convention of the American Federation of Labor. He declared that the present scale of wages prevailing in American industries—the highest in history—would have been impossible without it. Never before has American industry been so free from strife as it is today, he added.

On the other hand, the manufacturers and capitalists are insisting that cheap labor be imported. One manufacturers' publication states: "If Congress and the Secretary of Labor really intend to improve the condition of the farmer and industries in general, they must keep away from further extending immigration restriction.

"Nothing would inflict greater hardship on the farmer and the industries of this country than restricting influx of common labor by extending the quota provision of the immigration law to Mexico.

"Exclude it or restrict it as Oriental and European immigration is restricted, and the death knell of industrial prosperity in the west will follow."

Here we have two very opposite views, or rather the two sides of the same view, one that increased immigration will provide cheap labor for the man who hires labor—the other that restricted immigration will result in maintaining the high standard whch our labor organizations have made possible here. Both are right.

But it would seem to us that over and above all questions of high or low wages, cheap or expensive labor, one question should be considered by every American who gives thought to the immigration question, that is, will these people improve our citizenry—will they obey our laws, maintain our institutions, educate their children as American children should be educated, and in other ways assist in building up a better and still better commonwealth?

We believe that they will not. The very argument put forth by the manufacturing interests proves that they will not. They will work for low wages, and are content with all that low wages imply, low standards in every line. By flooding the nation with cheap labor the Bounderbys and Gradgrinds of this age would place us in just such another period as far as the workman is concerned as England went through in the last century before the economic fabric could adjust itself to a mechanical age.

The well being of the nation is intimately connected with that of the worker. When the workman is forced to sell his labor in competition with the cheap labor of every other land, while the more fortunate manufacturer has his prices protected by a high tariff against the goods of other countries, that workman and consequently the nation will suffer, no matter how big the fortunes which may be built up by few out of the system.

To Survey Need Of Old Age Pension

Special to the Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, October 20—"Over the Hills to the Poor House' is a sad refrain which will soon cease in California, it is prophesized today, with the initiation o the official investigation of old age pensions with a view to adopting a pension system in California.

The 1927 legislature, considering it was somewhat its brother's keeper, particularly its old brother, appropriated $6,000 for a survey of the need of pensions for the aged and to recommend a feasible method of pensioning for this state.

With the appointment of Miss Esther de Turberville by Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, director of the department of social welfare, to carry on this investigation a new deal for the old folks is on its way.

"Give us this day a chance to earn our daily bread" is a plea of the aged which is often heard in vain. Modern industries demand youthful employees. Old men have difficulty getting employment. Satirically enough although the medical science has lengthened the span of human life the boasted efficiency of present day industry has cast the salvaged human life into the discard, according to Abraham Epstein, secretary for the American Association for Old Age Security.

Poverty and unemployment responsible for the increasing suicide rate in California, in the opinion of state officials. The state rate has reached 27.1 persons per 100,000 population, with San Diego leading with a rate of 48.9, according to a report issued by the state board of health this week.

An independent eventide of life is advocated by Charles J. Chenu, past prisedent of the Eagles and chairman of their committee on old age pensions.

"We have dodged too long our responsibility to those whose only crime is poverty," declared Chenu. "Sickness, family responsibility and other circumstances conspire in most cases to bring about dependency in old age. The poor-house, in many cases, soon becomes the death-house. Break an old man's pride and he has little left to live for, but make the same man partially self-supporting, give him a few of the dollars he has contributed to the wealth of society in his younger years, and he can have a contented old age."

A great total of $6,655,696.93 was expended by the counties of the state in maintaining county hospitals and alms houses according to the latest report of the State Department of Social Welfare. During the same fiscal year the counties expended $2,320,427.05 in outside relief for indigent people in their own homes.

San Mateo county, which expended $74,415.77 on its institutional care of the aged, stands out as one of the two counties of the state which did not allow home relief.

Meanwhile Placer county is noteworthy among its sister counties for spending more on its out relief than it does on its county hospitals, the former requiring an expenditure of $18,113.66 during the year and the latter only $7,853.70.

Merced county is particularly generous with its aid paying $61,655.95 for its county hospital and $12,127.22 for its outside relief, while its rival county of Stanislaus, double in population, expended only $28,516.70 on its county hospital and $14,169.71.

Among the northern counties, Glenn and Lassen are partially committed to a pension system because they each expend almost as much in home relief as in institutional care. Glenn county hospital cost $10,261.35 for the year and outrelief $7,318.86; and the Lassen hospital cost $12,717.35 and out relief $6,178.22.

Damages Awarded

Cancellation of Lease Results in $10,000 Suit

Damages totaling $10,000 and costs were awarded George R. Eaton against August Schilling, George F. Volam and John Stauffer Friday by Judge George H. Buck. Eaton sought $200,000 damages against the three men for cancellation of a lease for Brewer's island, just south of San Mateo.

According to Eaton the place had been leased him for cultivation in 1921. He spent thousands of dollars in cultivating the marshlands, and in 1924 the property was leased to the Mills estate. Eaton was ordered to leave as he did not have a written lease.

Judge Buck ruled Eaton had raised the value of the 1818 acres $25,000 and the rental from one thousand to five thousand dollars a year. He therefore granted the man damages, but ruled the Mills estate was to retain possession of the property.

Invitations Are Out

SEQUOIA ALUMNI PLAN HOME-COMING NOV. 5

Four hundred invitations will be sent out this week to the graduates of Sequoia Union High School inviting them to the big alumni home-coming night to be held November 5 on the local campus. After the four one-act operettas to be presented by the choral classes, the alumni will adjourn to the library, where dancing will be the main entertainment of the evening, the music being furnished by members of the Alumni society. Light refreshments will be served during the evening.

The purpose of this home-coming is to bring the alumni together oftener than once a year. Last year the only meeting was the banquet, held in honor of the graduating class, in June.

Forrie O'Connell, vice-president of the organization, states that much interest is being shown by alumni and he expects that a large group will turn out.

Wins on Cross Complaint

Mrs. Theresa Dora Knott, cross-complainant in a divorce action brought by her husband, Edward D. Knott, was awarded an interlocutory decree Friday by Superior Judge George H. Buck, on the grounds of extreme cruelty. Mrs. Knott was also awarded $400 as a settlement by the court.

Electric heat for cold rooms

Clean as the seaside sun—warm as a tropical beach—just the right amount of safe, healthful, heat quickly for any cold room.

They're made with a three-heat switch that can be turned to low, medium, or high. Some of these heaters operate on your regular lighting current. Where separate wiring is installed for heating, lower rates are available.

Ask us about the large portable electric heaters.

Footprints

In the "sands of time", footprints are marks of progress. In the business world, steps may often be symbols of lost motion. Much valuable time is wasted walking from desk to telephone and back again, when an office is not adequately supplied with extension telephones. And so the extension telephone in the office and plant, as well as in the home, is recognized as a saver of countless steps and valuable time.

Consult the business office of the telephone company for an extension plan best suited to your requirements.

Carrington, composer and coach.

"The Nifty Shop" and "Heads Off" are the most hilariously funny of the four operettas, and are exclusively Bass and Treble Cleff productions. The Bass Cleff is the boys' choral organization, while the Treble Cleff belongs to the girls. The casts of the two other one-act productions are made up of the choral classes.

"Miss Quarrier, you know my wishes. If you choose to disregard them—"

"Mr. Guthrie is an educated gentleman," broke in Joan, "not a cave man. I will be home by ten o'clock. Good night!" And crowding past the discomfited Swan, Joan Quarrier closed the door of the mission in his face.

"It is not difficult to tell who's commanding here," chuckled Guthrie.

"I don't like to humiliate the little man. He means well enough but if they will send weak men to work in this country, and the Oblates strong ones, like your friend, Pere Rousseau, the Indians will flock to the French."

"Oh, yes! I've been useful to them—that's why he doesn't dare exert the authority which my honorable brother bestowed upon him. Imagine, nursing three years in France, and having Mr. Swan to guide my faltering feet!" She laughed merrily, as they swung through the stinging air of the clearing.

The man beside her was hardly aware of his moccasins touching the brittle snow, so lifted in spirits was he with the nearness of the girl whose strange decision to winter at Albany defied analysis.

"You didn't tell me this afternoon why you deceived me as to your whereabouts in your Christmas letter," he hazarded.

"If I had told you, would you have come to see me?" she asked, turning her hood and meeting his eyes with frank, impersonal gaze.

"Yes!"

"That is the reason."

"You mean you didn't want to see me?"

"I mean that you had your work to do—it would have interfered."

He walked for a space in silence, then turned to her. "You are that kind of a woman—you understand."

"I hope so."

He was thrilled by the thought that Joan Quarrier's friendship was like that. But why had she stayed? Could it be that after the photographs she had seen at Elkwan with their inscriptions, she had stayed nevertheless at Albany because—because what? He could tell her now that he was free, since his reply to Ethel's letter which went out that afternoon to Moose. But what had his freedom to do with the girl whose overshoes crunched the snow beside him?

"I would like to ask you a question," he said at length.

Her laugh rippled on the frosty air. "This sounds interesting, Mr. Exile, but to avoid anti-climax you should wait for our walk back—the moon will be up then."

"The question won't wait," he replied. "Has your brother written you of my engagement?"

"Yes."

"Thank you! I wanted to tell you that it has been broken—by her—in this Christmas mail."

In silence the girl walked, stiffly, Garth thought, watching her with head turned to the river. He looked but could not see her face, buried in the fur hood.

"The reason given was—Ninda."

She turned fiercely questioning eyes as she demanded: "He told your family that story?"

"Evidently," said Garth grimly. If there was capacity for feeling in this girl, he thought, she'll show it now. "My brother has done with me, you see. I've disgraced the family."

"No, I don't see," she said, hoarsely, gazing straight ahead. "My brother has told that story in Montreal—injured you beyond reparation—my brother!"

"I'm sorry I told you," he replied, shocked at the depth of her emotion. "But I wanted you to know that my shackles are off—I'm a free man. I wanted you to know—"

In the tide of emotion which stirred him, Guthrie faltered, stopped. The shoulders of the girl lifted in a sob, as she turned to conceal her distress.

He touched her, thrilling at the contact. "Please—I'm so sorry!" he said.

"My brother!— How low, utterly low!" he heard her say. Then she got herself in hand—straightened, and said: "I will write at once to your brother."

"You'll do no such thing. Do you suppose I'd allow you to soil yourself with this family row? Your brother has unintentionally done me a service, for which I thank him."

Joan's dark brows contracted, as she gravely searched his face. "You—are not joking—you mean it?"

"I mean every syllable of it. Now let's forget it all and get on to the Camerons' before you freeze out here! It's growing sharp," he said, but what he meant was: If you stand there another second looking at me like that, Joan Quarrier, I'll kiss you.

The talk of the factor's was not allowed by that jubilant fur trader to stray far from the mad raid on Akimiski by Garth and Etienne, and the medicine-making of old Saul. From the mouth of Cameron, Joan Quarrier learned the details of the desperate effort to save the trade and its ultimate success.

"Aren't you proud of yourself, Mr. Exile?" she said as Cameron finished, and her patent joy in his success was like wine to his blood. "And Shot, too, he earned his citation—but how gruesome it was—awful!"

As he walked beside her under the frosted stars to the mission, Guthrie strove to shift the conversation to the personal—to recapture the note struck with such poignancy when she learned the aftermath of her brother's story in Montreal, but the armor of her reserve defied him. Baffled by her mood, but respecting it, he asked if he might come to say goodby the following morning, and left her at the mission door.

To the man whose love had been on his lips when his hand touched her shoulder, the new mood of the girl defied analysis. He had left the Camerons' full of what Joan Quarrier had come to mean to him—hungry to tell her there above the white Albany what he had first sensed that September night, caught in the magic of her nearness. Here, on the rim of the world, with only the glittering stars to see, he would have offered the scarred face and the love of Garth Guthrie, black sheep; but she had known his purpose and closed his lips. Yet why, unless the exile up the coast had meant more than a passing friendship, had she stayed on to the drudgery—the unspeakable monotony of the mission?

She was waiting in the clearing when Shot loped up, sniffed, looked at her curiously, then pawed her joyfully with fore feet.

"Shot, you know me?" And she rubbed the ears of the wriggling airedale.

"He has a good memory for his friends," said Garth, as the dog leaped in the snow around the pleased girl.

"I think it quite wonderful, though, that he should remember me. He knew me but five days."

Garth's mouth curled. "His master knew you no longer." And the factor of Elkwan reveled in the slow color that touched her temples—the swift flickering of heavy-lashed lids.

"His master had reason to remember the guests who insulted him in his own house."

"One of his guests," countered Guthrie, "was an angel of mercy. We seldom forget the visitation of angels, do we?"

"And the other—an ungrateful scandal-monger."

"I told you last night he was a blessing in disguise."

She looked squarely in his eyes as she said: "But I did not believe you, Mr. Exile."

With a gesture of helplessness, he insisted, "But how am I to prove it to an unbeliever?"

Her eyes clouded. "Let's walk along the shore," she parried, and led the way, Shot circling her, begging for a frolic.

"You're trying again for the spring trade from the island?" she asked.

"Oh, with Souci there, and the echo of his spirit voices in their ears, we shall hold the hunters who crossed the strait."

"Then Elkwan will have a wonderful year?"

"Yes, the best in its history."

"Because of its new factor."

"Because of Etienne Savanne and Saul Souci."

"No," vehemently, "because you went inland and found Souci, and had the nerve to cross the channel through the ice in a York boat, then took a long chance over the new ice to reach the island in time; Mr. Cameron knows."

He glanced sharply at the clean profile, crowned by a plume of wind-tossed hair. "You're a doughty champion."

"No, I'm only a fair critic."

"May I never have a fairer—nor one more 'unfair.'"

"Unfair? What do you mean, Mr. Exile?"

She had given him his opening. "I mean, Joan Quarrier, that you have shut your heart to the truth," he plunged in impetuously. "I mean that you are coupling me with ghosts—dead memories; that you will not see—understand—" In his eagerness to clarify her vision of him—erase the memory of Ethel with whom, in spite of his denials, he still seemed hopelessly involved, Garth floundered—came to a halt through sheer excess of emotion.

"Can't we continue the good friends we are, Mr. Exile? We need friendship—understanding, up here on this lonely coast. Can't we—like two good comrades—hold to what we have?"

Dazed, helpless in the face of her obsession—her evident conviction that her brother had been the cause of his ultimate break with Ethel Falconer, Guthrie walked on in silence.

"Can't we hold to our friendship," she repeated, facing him, and slipping off her mitten, extended her hand.

He took it. At the raw pain in his eyes Joan Quarrier's lips opened in an involuntary catch of the breath. Her eyes widened in a look of wonder, as if startled by what she saw.

"You know you always will have my friendship," he said thickly. "I'm coming down the coast in February—to see my friend. May I?"

"Your friend will be very glad to see you."

At the door of the mission, she met his reluctant good-by with a smile so personal—so like a caress that the hand he gave her shook like a leaf in the wind.

"My friend," he repeated under his breath as he followed Shot back to Etienne and the waiting dog team, "my friend—my world."

Hour by hour, over the coast ice, the light sled reeled off the miles. So good was the going, so keen the five great huskies for the trail, that the men left their robes only to stretch their legs. The forty miles to the Big Willow river slid past by early afternoon, and the hungry men turned in to the river mouth to build a fire from driftwood and boil their kettle.

Twenty miles directly across the strait, the gray Akimiski hills parted to form Seal cove.

"I'd give a good deal to know how they took the news over there of the loss of the northern fur," Etienne," said Guthrie, busy with his plate of beans and bacon. "Hello! There's a team coming in over the ice. Wonder who it is."

For a time Etienne studied the black object through the binoculars, but when the kettle and fry-pan had been stowed and the sled cover relashed, two rifles in their skin cases rode by the sides of the passengers.

A mile from the noon camp at the river the sled, evidently headed for the mouth of the Kapiskau, drew inshore.

"A hunter from de Kapiskau. We veel now hear how dey swear on de schooner dis Christmas."

The dog-team slowed to a walk and shortly were within speaking distance.

"Kequay!" called Savanne. "W'ere you go?"

Leaving his panting dogs, who straightway lay down on the ice, the stranger hurried to the sled from Elkwan. As he approached, it was evident to the two men that the Cree was laboring under strong excitement. His sled was heavily loaded and his hard breathing indicated that he had run much crossing the strait. Staggering up, he gasped: "De boat—ovair dere! All gone! McDonal' Ha! Ha! dead—all dead"

"What?" cried Garth, "the schooner's crew—dead?"

"You come from dere—you see dem?" demanded the astute Etienne. A sinewy hand shot out, and gripping the Cree's shoulder, shook him violently.

"You see dem? How many?" repeated the half-breed, searching the Indian's face in an attempt to probe the truth of his statement.

"I see one dead man. No answer when I yell," insisted the other, and seemingly at the memory of the ship of the dead, his small eyes filled with dread.

"What happened? Was this man shot?" demanded Garth, exchanging glances with Savanne.

"He die of sickness—I look an' run. It was ver' bad down dere een dat boat," said the Indian with a shudder.

"W'ere the dogs there?"

"I see no dog."

"W'ere you from?" snarled Savanne, thrusting a face fierce with suspicion, into the Cree's.

"From de Kapiskau. I go to de boat to trade some fox."

"You get dat flour from de boat—steal it!" hazarded Etienne, guessing at the nature of the bulky load on the Indian's sled.

The Cree nodded. "Dey not use it now."

The swart face of the head man at Elkwan hardened into creased leather as he turned to Garth, and whispered: "I dunnuk dis t'ing. He see one man. Mebbe de oders ambush us. What we do?"

"I'm going over to find out. It's my duty. Boucher will wait for days. They may not all be dead. I'm going."

"Suppose eet ees a trick? Suppose de ones not dead wait for der revanche, w'en we come?"

"We'll stalk 'em and see."

Dropping his mittens and deliberately reaching under his capote, Etienne drew his skinning knife. Coolly running a thumb over the edge, he thrust his face into that of the disturbed Indian while his slit-like eyes snapped as he bit off the words: "You lie! McDonal' Ha! Ha! sen' you to Kapiskua. You spik de trut', or I—" and seizing the Indian by his hood, he made a quack pass at his throat.

Overawed by the fierceness of the strangers, the undersized Cree swayed on his feet, repeating in his seeming terror: "I spik de trut'. You go to de boat—you see!"

"We go to de boat—an' you go wid us," snarled Etienne.

At the words, the Indian's face went gray. "De spirit—I am scare to go back," he protested; but the inexorable Etienne ordered him to turn his dogs and lead the way back.

It was hard on the hunter, if his story was straight, but bearding a waiting McDonald in his lair was not to be lightly hazarded.

"I think the man is honest, Etienne. He naturally hated to go again to the ship. But what could have happened—flu—smallpox?"

Savanne shook his head. Only recently the bay had been swept by influenza, brought in by a whaler, impartially striking down Eskimos, Indians, and dogs, but he was still suspicious of a counterstroke by the schooner people, sore from their defeat, and confidently expected a confession from the dog driver ahead before the dusk caught them. Guthrie, on the contrary, believed that some epidemic, or possibly scurvy, had stricken the crew, and wondered if the great McDonald, in the pride of his strength, had found a grave in the Akimiski ice.

The Indian had seen but one body and fled, so he said; but the schooner had been silent as a tomb. Queer that all had died, so soon. As he left, he had called repeatedly from the deck, without answer, except once, faintly, he had heard something—like the voice of a spirit.

When the Cree had reluctantly cached his load of flour and they started to cross the twenty miles of ice, he begged them not to force him into that grave of white men. The ship was haunted by demons, an Indian from the north had said. They had brought the sickness—were displeased with McDonald Ha! Ha!—and would surely bewitch him if he again went to that ship of the dead. But Etienne insisted that the seeming fear of the Cree was only a ruse to lead them into the trap while he hung back and thus avoided a shot in the back for his treachery.

Childish Frankness

Speaking of embarrassing moments, Mrs. F. S. R. writes that she took her four-year-old daughter with her when calling one afternoon and they had not been in a woman's house long when the little one remarked:

"You may as well start getting dinner, Mrs. Brown, 'cause daddy's out of town an' if you ask us we can stay to dinner just as well as not."

"Needless to say," adds Mrs. F. S. R., "we got the invitation and I was very much embarrassed."—Boston Transcript.

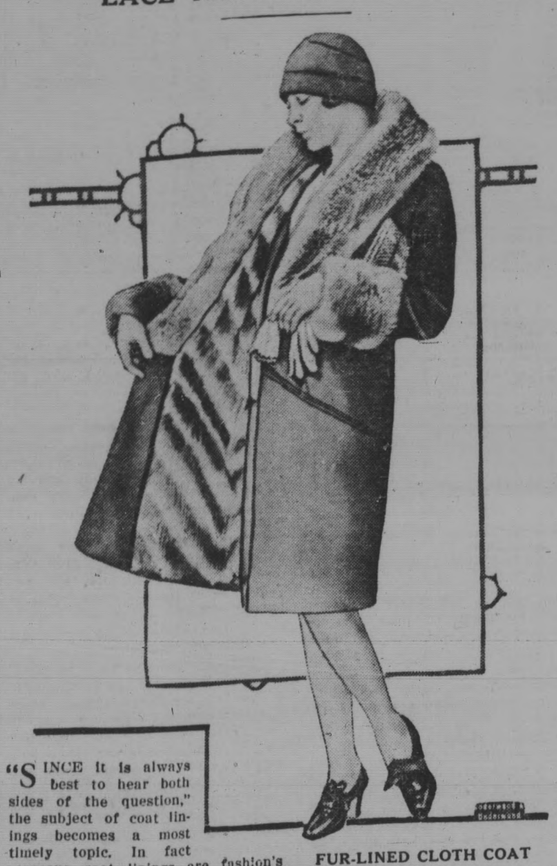
SWAGGER FUR-LINED COATS; LACE TRIMMED VELVET GOWNS



FUR-LINED CLOTH COAT

"SINCE it is always best to hear both sides of the question," the subject of coat linings becomes a most timely topic. In fact gorgeous coat linings are fashion's newest thrill.

With this matter of novelty coat linings the stylist is dealing with a lavish hand. Like the "silver lining to every cloud," coat linings are a revelation this season, of infinite beauty and design. Exotic birds hand worked, or machine embroidered, or gay florals spread their wings and petals in captivity on the inside of many a swagger coat.

When milady throws back her coat with studied grace and deliberate intention, what a display of design, color and fine needlework will greet the observing eye! Perhaps this elaboration will be concentrated on a large inside pocket, for pockets of a fanciful sort adorn many a handsome lining.

For the very most swagger cloth coat the mode answers the call for handsome linings by furring the garment both inside and out. Thus the woman of fashion who follows the smart vogue of wearing a fur-trimmed cloth coat does not sacrifice the warmth and comfort which her all-fur coat always provides. The de luxe coat in the picture not only enhances the suede cloth of which it is made with a modish fur shawl collar, but it lines it throughout with exquisite fur.

For evening, reversible coats, velvet on one side, metal brocade on the other, are among the handsomest offerings of the season.

Shirred chiffon also plays an interesting role in the way of lining for the opera coat.

As to sports coats, both fur and bright plaid woolens enlist as suitable linings.

So far as the present season is concerned, luxurious dress is not the exception, but rather is it the rule. Velvets, satins and all fine fabrics, furs, laces and jewels, enough and to spare for everybody! Thus with a lavish hand does the mode paint its autumn and winter picture.

As to velvet, it would seem as if all the sartorial world is trending velvetward. Not this season is velvet restricted to the realm of the grand dame exclusively. Youth is having its fling at velvet as never before. In fact everybody is expected to wear velvet who would be eligible to the list of fashionables.

Youthfully styled velvets are the order of the day. To that end velvet is being plaited and shirred and handled in every artful way. Of course if the new velvets were not endowed with an amazing suppleness and sheerness, the stylist could not have achieved such a charmingly girlish model as the one in the picture.

Another tendency of the mode is to express the exquisitely feminine not only in matter of fabric but in matter of styling as well. Everybody will admit the feminizing influence of a touch of lace. So there you have it, velvet plus lace interpreting at once elegance and alluring femininity, just as you see it in this picture.

The yoke of princess lace in this frock is richly studded with dull gold beads. Often one sees lace cape collars starred with tiny rhinestones, which again emphasizes the sentiment of the mode for elaborated themes.

The idea of lace trimming for velvet or satin frocks cannot be overemphasized. Not only are simple laces in use, but bits of rare laces adorn the new afternoon and evening frocks in the way of yokes, cascades, deep cuffs, flounces and in every intriguing manner.

VELVET FROCK TOUCHED WITH LACE

Browns Are Winning

Despite the demand for grays and blacks for evening, for greens and blues for semi-formal afternoon wear, the browns are coming into their own for sport costumes, as is usually the case in the fall.

Hats for Fall

The newest felt hats for autumn wear have long white hairs through the felt, which gives a soft and blurred look to the felt.

Matching Bag and Shoes

The popular shoes of blue leather can be matched to a bag consisting of two triangular pieces of blue and white leather set on to form an oblong.

Boleros, Belts and Sashes

Boleros will be a feature of the fall line, and belts and sashes will be so placed as to indicate both the higher and the lower waistline. Some are tied in front instead of at the side.

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

Original No Trump Bids

IN CONSIDERING a no trump bid there are a few restrictions which should be mentioned:

Frequently a hand will meet all of the requirements of a no trump bid and also contain a five-card suit with ample support for a bid of that suit. Either a no trump or a suit bid may be made; which shall it be?

All of the rules of Auction have been determined from the mathematical law of averages by trying a large number of experiments, and it has been found that a good five-card suit bid is much safer than a no trump, especially when the hand contains a worthless doubleton. Therefore, if all bids had equal game-going possibilities the suit always would be chosen, but because of the various counts the no trump has the greatest game-going possibility. It requires but three odd tricks to make game in no trump while four odd are necessary in a major suit and five odd in a minor.

Taking these differences into consideration it has been found that most hands of the above-mentioned type will produce game oftener at no trump if the long suit is a minor, but that the chances for game are better with the suit as trump if that suit is a major. Therefore, we obtain the simple rule that when holding a hand from which a bid of a suit or of no trump may be made, to bid the suit if it is a major but to bid no trump if the strong suit is a minor.

Another matter of importance in a no trump declaration is the distribution of the cards in the various suits. The most favorable distributions for a no trump bid are 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2 and 5-3-3-2; while 5-4-2-2, 5-4-3-1, 5-5-2-1 and 5-4-4-0 are increasingly more dangerous. In other words, two doubletons are very undesirable unless both are protected suits; a singleton is decidedly objectionable; and being void of a suit prohibits a no trump bid.

The reasons for this are easy to see. If the bidder is very short of a suit some one at the table is probably very long in that suit, and if the opponents open it and dummy does not have it stopped the opponents are quite sure to take five or six tricks in it before the declarer can get the lead.

It is not wise to abandon a good no trump because of holding a singleton Ace or King, since even if that suit is led, the declarer could expect to stop it by taking the first trick. However, if the hand has a worthless singleton much more heed should be given to it. A major worthless singleton is not nearly so dangerous as a minor, because if second hand holds a powerful major suit he is quite sure to bid it while he would invariably pass when holding an equally strong minor suit.

A hand which contains two suits of at least five cards, either of which is strong enough for an original bid, is called a "two-suiter" and is considered the strongest possible hand at Auction when played with that suit for trump which best fits the partner's hand. A no trump should not be bid when holding a two-suiter.

We find a slight difference between an original bid by third hand and one by dealer or second hand because third hand's partner, by passing, has informed him that he does not hold four sure tricks. Therefore, third hand should have 2½ quick tricks in order to make an original bid of one.

When we reach fourth hand this same condition exists, but there is another reason why fourth hand should have added strength before making an original bid. After three players have passed, unless fourth hand has an especially strong holding the indications are that the cards are very evenly divided, and that fourth hand could not make game, which should be the goal aimed at by every bid. If fourth hand passes, the hand is not played, but if he bids, it opens up a new round of bidding and the opponents may start a secondary bid upon which they may be able to help each other sufficiently to go game. Therefore, unless fourth hand has at least one quick trick more than the requirements for an original bid by dealer or second hand, he should pass and throw down the hand.

Ear of Slain Bull Prize for Matador

It will not be long, according to a recent report, before bullfighting is ousted as the national sport of Spain. When bullfighting goes, it will take with it the custom of rewarding the successful matador with the ear of the bull that he kills.

To the successful contestant in the "corrida" the ear of the bull means as much as the silver cup to a winning tennis player or as the little gold football to the college halfback. It is the bullfighter's "medal of honor." When an unusually skillful matador has disposed of a bull the populace at a bullfight stands up and shouts, "La oreja! La oreja!" ("The ear! The ear!")

This means that the crowd wants the president of the "corrida" to award to the fortunate matador, as an especial mark of distinction, one of the ears of the bull. The ear is cut off and presented on a platter.

Oysters

An oyster lays about 60,000,000 eggs a year. If just one oyster were left alone by all and sundry, says Professor Lull, until it had great-great-grandchildren, their shells would make a pile eight times the size of the earth. Fortunately, the infant mortality rate among oysters is very high.

Cabinet Officers

Membership in the President's cabinet is a commission at the pleasure of the President for the time being.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

MOTHER AND BABE IN BATTLE'S ROAR

Denison, Iowa.—To have passed safely throug. the battle of Gettysburg with her baby less than a week old, although under fire throughout the battle, was the experience of Mrs. Georgia Wade McClellan, ninety-three, of this city, who just died.

Mrs. McClellan, the wife of a Union soldier, lived on East Cemetery hill, Gettysburg, Pa. Her baby, Kenneth, was born on June 26, 1863. Even at the time the child was born Union and Confederate soldiers were mobilizing in that vicinity.

Five days later the firing started. The house was so situated as to be within the Union lines and exposed constantly to Confederate fire. To the Confederates it appeared to be an ideal location for Union snipers; so the house throughout the battle was the target of the Confederates.

Early in the battle a bullet passed through the wall of the house and dropped, spent but still hot, on the pillow on which the mother and her child lay. As the battle progressed the yard was filled with wounded Union soldiers.

Every pane of glass in the house was broken by Confederate bullets. Early the second morning of the battle a Confederate sharpshooter's bullet crashed through a door, buried itself in the heart of Mrs. McClellan's sister, who was baking biscuits for the Union soldiers, and caused her death almost instantly. A huge shrapnel shell lodged in the top of the house, splitting open a partition. It failed to explode.

Summoned by Mrs. McClellan's screams, Union soldiers came to the house. Observing the situation, they assisted Mrs. McClellan, her baby, her mother and her mother's small children through the aperture made by the shrapnel shell and into the basement, where they remained until the battle was over.

A monument to Mrs. McClellan's sister, Virginia Wade, who was killed, was erected in 1900 by the Iowa Woman's Relief corps.

Mrs. McClellan's son, who was born just before the battle, now lives in Billings, Mont.

TERROR OF THE UNKNOWN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE troubles and the pains which we contemplate are generally far more serious than those which we have experienced. I am to have a tooth extracted tomorrow, and I shudder at the thought, and yet as I recall the dental experiences which I have previously gone through, I found them not nearly so dreadful as I had anticipated. I am to meet an angry and disgruntled parent this afternoon, who will have come five hundred miles to voice his dissatisfaction at the way his offspring has been mentally manhandled by his instructors and the administration generally. I dread the ordeal, and yet I know I shall get through it quite amicably when the moment arrives.

Elizabeth had come down from the country to enter high school. She had never been away from home alone before, and the people young and old whom she was to meet next day were all strangers to her. The subjects she was to take up were new and strange; the methods of teaching were to be quite unfamiliar to her. Her face took on a very serious look as we sat quietly before the fire in the dusk of Sunday evening. There were tears in her eyes as she turned to me, and a tremor in her voice.

"Won't tomorrow be an awful day!" she said. It was the terror of the unknown and the inexperienced which was taking hold of her. When she met it, she found that her fears had been for nothing. She had had a very happy day she announced when she came home at night, and through the years that followed, the experience continued. When it was through, there were tears in her eyes again because the experience which she had so dreaded was over.

Mack was going out to a new job. He had worked hard in college and had undertaken a number of things which he had carried to a conclusion very successfully. He was to try something entirely new this time in a distant city which he had never yet seen. His heart failed him a little.

"Tell me what to do," he asked. 'How shall I meet the new situation?"

"The new job," I explained, "is going to be very little different from the old ones you have had. People are about the same wherever you find them. Make yourself useful and necessary to the people for whom you are working, and you will get on; and, above all, be yourself."

Mack is getting on. The terror of the inexperienced left him shortly, and he is as much at home on the new job as he used to be on the old.

I wonder often, as most of us do, I imagine, how I shall meet the great change which comes at the end of life. My father used to say when he thought of the "last judgment," "That will be an awful day," but he went very peacefully as if he were dropping off to sleep. His terror of the unknown vanished.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Much Treasure Is Found Under Turkish Capital

Constantinople. — Treasures of the Byzantine empire and a tomb of living death have been discovered in an ancient cistern by Prof. Edmund Tilley, an American attached to Roberts college.

For two years this young American has been exploring the maze of ancient cisterns and mysterious passages beneath the city of Constantinople. Pits which the Turks always regarded merely as wells he has proved to be Byzantine cisterns, many of them rich in relics and art of the period of the Greek emperors.

His explorations have led him through a series of amazing adventures and have culminated with a grisly climax in his discovery of "the coffin cistern."

A Living Tomb.

Here Professor Tilley found not only the usual beautiful columns, with carved capitals rising in blackness from heaps of rubbish scurried over by rats, but a living tomb, as well. The first object his flashlight fell upon was an ancient coffin, and beside the coffin, lying on a bed of burlap and straw, was an old man, dying.

How many years the old man had made the black Byzantine pit his home and how he had managed to provide himself with a coffin are unsolved mysteries, for he died as the people whom the explorers had called for help carried him out of his living grave into the sunlight, which he had so long avoided, above.

Of the several hundred cisterns which make a labyrinth of the ancient city, underworld, many of the fifty-eight thus far located are still partly filled with water from mysterious unlocated sources. Most of these cisterns are accessible only by rope ladders swung down wellheads, and can be investigated only by wading through slimy mud and dirty, icy water.

The cold and foul air makes impossible a long stay below, and no attempt has yet been made to unearth the jewels and treasures of old Byzantium, which were buried in cisterns during riots and raids. A Turkish soldier who has been assisting Professor Tilley discovered an antique Janissary sword sticking in the mud of one cistern.

Finds Blind Fish.

In one large cistern of thirty columns, situated beneath a modern Turkish hospital, Professor Tilley observed a peculiar blind fish.

The professor declares that the cisterns of Constantinople are the only unspoiled relics of Byzantine architecture. While all that the Byzantines built above ground has been destroyed, the cisterns, the solidity of which is a wonder of masonry, stand stanchly underground, untouched by earthquake, their porphyry and marble columns raising the unsolved question of why men in past ages created such beauty in the bowels of the earth.

LATEST IN BLOUSE

The blouse, as it is created by Paris inspiration, is decidedly more interesting than was the simple shirt or gilet which has been the accepted model in past years. In many cases of the Paris creations, the blouse is apparently a three-quarter part of the entire costume, covering the hips, over a simple skirt finely plaited.

There are many types of blouses seen to intrigue shoppers and their uses are many. They may, apparently, make the entire costume by chic lines, or may appear as just a part of a smart ensemble. The hat may be gray, which is especially popular just now, or in any color which the wearer may select, for in headgear individuality is the one desire of the well-dressed woman.

Chiffons, printed silks and crepes in all sorts of lovely designs are used to accompany skirts in a harmonizing manner.

Lames, satins, brocaded fabrics and other materials suited to the formal mode appear, too, accompanying skirts of a formal nature. Long tie ends at the waist, sleeves quaintly designed and necks of interest are usually features of the formal blouse.

KING'S DERBY HAT WORTH $100,000

Diamond Ornament Saves Headpiece From Fire.

Bangkok, Siam—King Sisowath of Cambodia has died, leaving behind him the most expensive hat in the world. Cambodia is a French protectorate which once was a corner of Siam.

King Sisowath inherited from his brother a brown derby which was valued at $100,000, because of a huge knob of diamonds which adorned its top.

According to royal custom the hat should have been burned upon the death of its first owner, but one of his numerous widows appealed to King Sisowath to save it from extinction because she admired it so. The new king gratified her wish.

More than 500 widows survive the monarch—more than mourned the death of King Solomon.

He visited Paris before the war accompanied by 200 of his wives, and wearing red shoes, a dress coat and a battered opera hat which he soon replaced with his favorite bowler.

"The French women," he said, "continually interrupt their husbands' conversation without fear of punishment."

On his way to France the monarch became seasick. That worried him, for he could not understand why a king should be seasick like common folk.

One day he became concerned about his whereabouts after seeing nothing but water for a number of days. He sent for the captain of the boat, who assured him that they would sight land the next day. They did sight land the next day, and his majesty was so pleased that he ordered a special hymn of joy to be sung for Buddha.

His surprise at the captain's "prediction" coming true was so great that he decorated him with a Cambodia order, observing at the same time, with a touch of hauteur, that it was strange the captain knew where his ship was while his majesty did not.

Stone Age Relics Show Old Migration Road

Berlin.—About 2,500 B. C. there was a great north-and-south migration through central Europe, which used the still contested territory of Silesia, lying between Poland and Germany, as its track. Recent excavations have shown the trail of the moving tribes to be marked with all manner of implements and ornaments dating back to the new Stone age, according to Prof. H. Seger of Breslau.

One of the most interesting of the finds is a clay image of a ram, rudely made but well proportioned, and with an effort at realism in representing the lines on its wide, curved horns, the wrinkles on its neck and the curly wool. The statue is about a foot high and a little over fourteen inches long, which Professor Seger characterizes as "monumental" for that period in the history of the race. It is believed to have been used in connection with religious ceremonies.

Ancient Roman Kitchen Found in Great Britain

Epsom, Surrey.—Roman remains dating back to the time when the British Amazonian Queen Boadicea rose in revolt, have been brought to light near here.

Excavations on the site of the Roman villa in Ashstead wood, discovered by A. Lowther, two years ago, have shown that underneath and extending beyond the rear of the building are the walls of an earlier structure. From the manner in which it was built and the style of the material used it is considered that it was destroyed about 60 A. D., or the period of the "rising of Boadicea. The latter building probably dates to the time of Hadrian, 130 D. D., and remained, to judge from the latest finds of pottery, until at least 250 A. D.

The latest discoveries include a kitchen with an oven tiled at the side and connected at the bottom full of charcoal, an enamel bronze brooch with the design of a dolphin on it, two blue glass beads, a silver coin of Hadrian, and a small head of a swan.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Who Discovered Electric Lights?

Sir Humphrey Davy, a chemist (1778-1829) discovered that two wires attached to a battery in a certain way and with charcoal on the ends would allow current to jump from one wire to the other with such speed that the charcoal became white hot, producing a bridge of light. From this beginning arc-lights were developed.

Last Saturday morning the cosy home of Mrs. Harry B. Morey was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Morey and her daughter occupied the sleeping porch and before they were awakened by the noice of the fire, the apartment was in flames. The occupants of the room barely escaped with their lives. Mrs. Morey was badly scorched and burned about the face and hands but not seriously. Only an old family rocker was saved from the blaze. The Menlo Fire Department was engaged in subduing a fire at the Feliz place and did not respond to the call. The Redwood City department was sent for but before it arrived the fire had destroyed the building. The total loss was about $8,000, covered by insurance to the extent of $4500. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Mrs. Morey plans to rebuild.

American Telephone and Telegraph Company stockholders now number nearly 422,000. Quarterly dividend checks were mailed October 15th to 421,982 stockholders by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. This is the largest number to which the corporation has ever paid a dividend and exceeds by 1,691 the number receiving checks for the preceding quarter.

There were no important changes during the quarter in the distribution of the stock. Only four per cent is held by brokers, the balance being owned by investors throughout the country, including 5,000 living in foreign countries.

The avearge number of shares held per stocholder is only 26. However, more than one-half of the stocholders own ten shares or less, and more than three-fourths own 25 shares or less. The number of stockholders owning five shares or less exceeds the total number in any other American corporation. No stockholder owns as much as one per cent of the outstanding stock.

Early Head Covering

The earliest form of hat known, according to some historians, was the circular, close-fitting cap, worn either plain or braided. Ancient pictures show that it was worn by captives from Palestine in Assyria, and it appeared also on the heads of the pictured deities among the heathen tribes.

The Greeks in early times wore two kinds of hat, the "pileus" and the "petasus." The former had no brim, while the latter was made of felt and had a wide brim to protect the wearer from the sun. It is believed that the present-day felt hat is its direct descendant.—New York Times.
